Birdview Satellite Plans Sky-High Revenues for '82

By Lloyd Covens
Editor

(Chanute, Kansas)--Many said it couldn't be done, but in less than a year, Charles(Bud) Ross has put together one of a few full-line (publicly-held) companies which has begun production of an economic, totally in-shop(including LNA's)TVRO system. And for Birdview Satellite, its goals to bring full systems to the market, means bringing full-service as well. And as the spun-aluminum nine-foot dishes begin coming off the production lines, other, high-technology applications make a fixed seven and a half foot dish another strong future product.

"I've always taken the position that you don't want to be the most expensive or the cheapest—I want to make a product that is the best value for the money," says Ross, recalling the days at Kustom Electronics, the first firm to build moving speed detection devices and install computers in police stations, and the firm that built the first ten-foot speaker systems for rock groups and other bands. Then, as now, Ross is joined by Robert Owens, who represented Ross' national sales effort and does the same for Birdview as it launches production and aims at sales in 21 Midwestern and Rocky Mountain states.

In November, 1980 Ross asked a local friend about satellite earth stations. His friend, an engineer who liked to fool around with the new technology, said he had considered building a dish (definitions follow later in this story) and gave Ross a stack of books about the new technology. Ross proceeded to spend the next week without much sleep as he pored over the information contained in those volumes . . . and a little over a week later called together an engineering meeting to analyze the potential for earth station manufacturing.

A year later in November, 1981, Ross and his team of specialists had gone public with offering of Birdview Satellite . . . and the capital to proceed with the development of a $3,000 package—about one fourth the price tag Ross first encountered in his research. The public offering produced capitalization at $3.5 million for Birdview.

While it would have been easier to buy earth station components from the 200-odd manufacturers of the various elements that go into producing the systems which pick up these space signals, Ross and his assocites decided to build everything from scratch.

Today, from their two manufacturing locations—75,000 sq. ft. in Olathe and Chanute Kansas—Ross hopes to ship 200-300 satellite systems in May and increase production to 500 per month for June to September, 1982. Multiply each unit times $3,000 (suggested retail), and you'll see why Ross is optimistically looking for projected sales of $5 million (April through September, 1982) and total projected first year revenues of $18 to $24 million (projected for year ending March 3, 1983).

Birdview's "thresehold-extension" circuitry will make it possible to gain back several db from weaker transponders. The system works similar to a 4-wheel drive/2-wheel drive transmission which allows greater traction climbing, then switched when you hit the highway. This feature says Ross, will allow Birdview to make and market a seven-and-a-half foot dish(stationary) able to pull in weaker transponder signals, not currently viable with many smaller dishes. The smaller size also means smaller price-tag than Birdview's current model 20/20. A launch date for the smaller dish is still not fixed, but it could be as early as this Fall, 1982.

For the future, Birdview plans to continue negotiations with many cable firms, interested themselves in offering a low-priced, highly reliable satellite system for those persons who are rural enough to never expect cable service.

With an aluminum spun dish, Birdview is setting up local dealers throughout its market area. The company plans to work with established video dealers, and back their suppliers with a one-year warranty. Beyond the initial 21 states, Ross says, is the rest of the country...and hoped-for "sky-high" profits in one of the major growth-industries of the 1980s.

NE Show Nets 34 Nat'l Firms

Special To Channel Guide

(Putnam, Conn.)--The first major satellite show for the Northeastern United States has signed 34 regional and national companies, and show organizer Peter Aucoin is looking forward to several thousand visitors for the show, May 27-30.

The show is co-sponsored by Aucoin's Satellite Services Bureau and by JV Electronics of Landing, New Jersey, and will feature daily seminars on various aspects of the TVRO business. The first two days(Thursday and Friday, May 27 & 28) will be devoted to dealers and interested business people. Saturday and Sunday will be open to the public.

"The Northeast has great potential for TVRO growth," says Aucoin, noting that most of the previous TVRO shows have been held in the South and the West. "We have the population, the economic base, and the consumer desire for alternative entertainment," he says, pointing out the many rural areas of New England not wired for cable. For many thousands, the Northeastern Show will be the first up-close exposure to the consumer TVRO business.

Among the seminar speakers for the show:

Clyde Washburn, Jr.: Understanding Receiver Technology(designer of the Washburn antenna, Chief Engineer, Earth Terminals);

Victor Pomper(Satellite Data) on Business Success in Dynamically Growing Industries;

Andy Gibbs and Vincent Finelli (Telecomm Industries), on "How to Make It As A Satellite Communications Dealer;

Joe Valentino (JV Electronics) on "Choosing the Right Components" and another talk on "Increased Profits through Accessory Sales; and

John Ramsey(Ramsey Electronics)- "The Role of SPACE in the New Industry,"(Ramsey is a SPACE board member).

Exhibits will be open daily from 9AM to 8PM, with a special drawing for a complete TVRO system held Sunday night.

Accomodations may be made with Howard Johnsons, Windsor Locks, Connecticut,(203) 623-9811, (203) 555-1212.

As of press time, here are the exhibitors for the Northeastern show:

So You're Going to Buy An Earth Station

By Rick Eye
Channel Guide Research Editor

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a continuing series on earth station hardware and performance data. Questions and comments should be directed to Rick's attention at 3702 Gravois, St. Louis, Missouri, 63116).

So you're going to buy an Earth Station. Before you do, let's look at the options, features and parts of an earth station.

ANTENNAS

You will need an antenna, and there are many choices. First will it be fiberglass, aluminum or mesh?

A fiberglass dish is screen or tinfoil covered by fiberglass and "gelcoat." The number of pieces vary from one to seven, according to the manufacturer.

An aluminum dish is stamped or formed aluminum pieces assembled into a single dish. Some manufacturers are using steel and other rigid, reflective metals. The number of pieces range from three to thirty-six according to the size of the dish and the manufacturer.

A mesh dish is screened laid over a framework of aluminum, steel or other non-flexible material. The number of pieces vary from one to four, however most are one piece.

Your selection of a dish is very important. The dish size and the accuracy of the parabola are the cheapest and most efficient ways to increase signal quality. I'll have an article in a few weeks on selecting an antenna.

Dish size, first is the cheapest way to increase signal quality. However, if you select a twelve-foot dish with four parabola accuracy over a ten-foot dish with excellent parabola accuracy, your signal quality will of course suffer.

How do you tell parabola accuracy? You really can't tell by looking at a dish. However if there is a question as to the parabolic accuracy of a dish, you can buy a computer printout for that parabola, if you can find out the f/d(focal length /diameter) ratio from the manufacturer.

Then you can plot the parabola and make a template out of plywood and test the surface of the dish. Fiberglass dishes are a little hard to test, because the surface of the dish is not neccessarily the surface of the parabola. One type of dish over another is a technical decision as well as an esthetic one. There are other types of antenna, and I'll cover those, and also an article on testing on parabola, in future issues.

RECEIVERS

You will need a receiver, here also there are many choices. Like television sets, you can buy a cheap one or an expensive one, or one that is medium priced, according to your tastes and budget.

Price is some measure of a receivers quality. However, it's not the only measure, or the most accurate.

Channel Guide is set up on a grid format which reads across the pages facing one another. For example, start above with May 17, find your appropriate time zone, and continue across the page for additional programming information. The right side of program day continues all four time zones as set up on the left page, with only the Eastern time zone indicated so that we may include more listings.

As shown along the top, the satellite transponder number is indicated for the service, and the satellite carried is indicated below the transponder lines.

For purposes of comparison, the major movie channels are shown on the left page of the program day, with other miscellaneous services shown on the right.

A TVRO Glossary

Compiled by Leslie Howard
Channel Guide Feature Editor

Here is a basic glossary of terms to help the layman understand the articles he or she find in Channel Guide. This is by no means all you need to know; but will provide a good basic vocabulary on the various aspects of TVRO.

Amplifier-A device used to boost the strength of an electronic signal. Amplifiers are spaced at intervals throughout a cable system to rebuild the strength of television signals which weaken as they pass through the cable network.

Antenna- A device used to transmit or receive broadcast signals.

Azimuth (AZ)- The horizontal pointing angle of an antenna measured clockwise in degrees from true North.

Cassegrain Feed System-A radiating system which includes a primary reflector("dish"), secondary reflector and feedhorn. Named for Nicholas Cassegrain, a 17th century French physician who invented a telescope using this principle.

Decibel (dB)- A term used to express the ratio of two power levels.

Downconverter- A device which selects and reduces the frequency of a received signal, typically from RF to IF.

Earth Station- A ground terminal that uses an antenna and associated electronic equipment to transmit, receive and process communications via satellite.

Elevation (EL)- The angle above the horizontal plane an antenna must be raised in order to direct it toward the satellite.

Feedhorn- A device mounted at antenna focus that transfers signals between the antenna and associated electronic equipment.

Geostationary- Describes a satellite in orbit 22,300 miles above the equator and which revolves around the earth with an angular velocity equal to that of the earth's rotation.

Low Noise Amplifier(LNA)- A device which amplifies the received signal at an earth station. The LNA is mounted directly on the antenna.

Master Antenna Television System(MATV)-An antenna system that serves a concentration of television sets, such as an apartment building, a hotel or a motel.

Modulator- The electronic equipment required to combine video and audio signals from a studio and convert them to radio frequencies for distribution on a cable system. Also, a very low powered television signal generator used to provide signals for distribution on a Community Antenna Television system.

Mount- A structure which supports an earth station antenna. Frequently used types of mounts are polar mounts, azimuth/elevation(AZ/EL) mounts and wheel and track mounts.

Prime Focus- The point toward which a main reflector directs and concentrates the signals it receives.

Reflector- The antenna's main curved structure, or "dish,"which collects and focuses a signal onto either the secondary reflector(Cassegrain) or the feedhorn(Prime Focus).

Radio Frequency(RF)- The frequency spectrum between 15kHz and 100 GHz.

S/N- Signal to Noise ratio. Ratio of the signal power to the noise power in a specified bandwidth, usually expressed in dB.

TVRO(Television Receive-Only earth station)-An antenna, usually dish-shaped, which receives TV and other signals from satellites.

Transponder- A microwave repeater(receiver and transmitter) in the satellite used to amplify and change the frequency of a received band of signals.

DID WE LEAVE SOMETHING OUT? If you feel there's something missing from this glossary, write Leslie Howard at Channel Guide, P.O. Box 2027, Englewood, Colo. 80150, and we'll include that definition in an updated version of this glossary in the future.

So You're Going To Buy An Earth Station

There are many features available on a receiver, here is a list of many of them:

1.Signal meter
2. Detente tuning
3.Variable tuning
4. Switchable audio
5.Variable audio
6.Remote control(wire)
7.Remote control(wireless)
8. Monitor ports
9.Built-in Modulator
10. AFC switch
11. Video inverter switch
12.Single or dual conversion
13. Down-converter at dish or at receiver
14.LNA power via coaxial cable
15. Built-in polarizor circuitry
16. Multi-receiver capability

Some of these features are a must, and some are luxury. I'll have an article on selecting a receiver and its features in future issues.

LNA(Low-Noise Amplifier)

You'll need an LNA, to amplify the signal your dish receives to a level your receiver can work with. There aren't many features on LNA's. However the size of your dish may determine the temperature of the LNA you'll need to get a good signal.

The temperature of the LNA determines the amount of amplification by the LNA, therefore temperature can effect your signal. Here's how it works: The lower the LNA temperature, the better the LNA, and the more the LNA costs.

Examine the chart below. You will see, for example, that an eight-foot dish with an 80-degree LNA provides a signal approximating a 12-foot dish with a 120-degree LNA. This gives you some idea of how the LNA can help increase your signal level. However, an LNA is not a replacement for a good parabola, or a larger dish by any stretch of the imagination. It is usually cheaper(and more efficient) to start with a larger dish with a good parabola.

NOTE: This chart was designed to demonstrate the LNA/Dish ratios. The numbers assigned are not relative to any formula or experimentation except that the comparison between dish sizes and LNA temperature are taken from actual experimental results.

LNC's(Low Noise Converters)

Some systems use a LNC, instead of an LNA. An LNC provides the same amplification as an LNA, with the added function of providing bandwidth down-conversion in place of a down-converter. This gets a little complex, and one of the problems with an LNC is that the frequency of the final conversion is designed to work only with the manufacturer's receiver. I'll explain this further in the future.

The point of this article is to make you aware of the many features and options available for an earth station. Ask questions when you get ready to buy and call around.

Happy viewing.

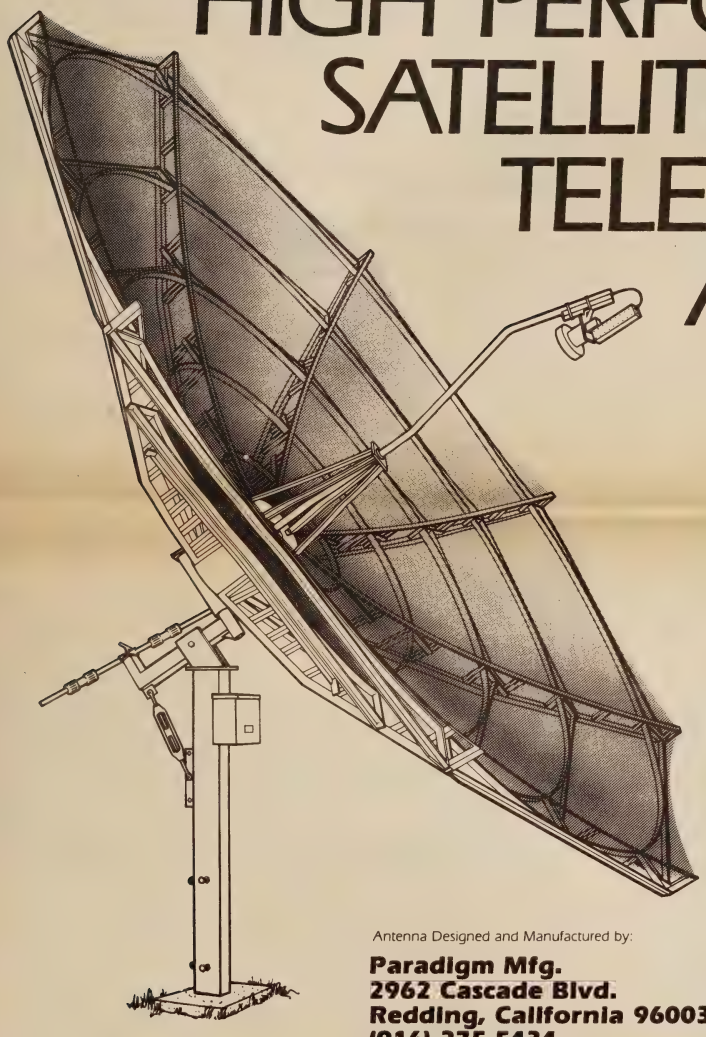
Paraclipse™

HIGH PERFORMANCE SATELLITE TELEVISION ANTENNA



Paraclipse is the satellite antenna you've been looking for. Our powerful antenna system pulls all available channels down to Earth with remarkable clarity. The Paraclipse is polar mounted, has a motorized LNA mount and a Chapparal feedhorn.

We use strong, lightweight welded aluminum truss construction and heavy duty expanded aluminum radar mesh for a long, long trouble-free life.

The entire antenna and mount ships in a box that measure 12''x 36''x 72'' and weighs 275 pounds.

Inspect one of our systems, if our design, materials and reception don't convince you, our very competitive prices will.

We also distribute Avcom receivers and associated components. We feature the all-new Avcom Com-2 receiver, Drake and KLM receivers and Paraclipse Terrestial Interference Filters.

MY MOST REMOTE INSTALLATION...

Channel Guide wants to recognize those brave souls and innovative thinkers who have encountered unmeasureable odds in installing a TVRO system. Write us with your most remote(or difficult TVRO installation) and give us the detals of where it was and the details of how you solved problems with terrain, mother nature or even the electric company.

We'll reprint your stories here (please make your submissions no longer than 250 words) and the most unique, innovative story wins a special prize to be awarded this August. Send your "Most Remote Install" story to Channel Guide, c/o Lloyd Covens, P.O. Box 2027, Englewood, Colorado 80150.

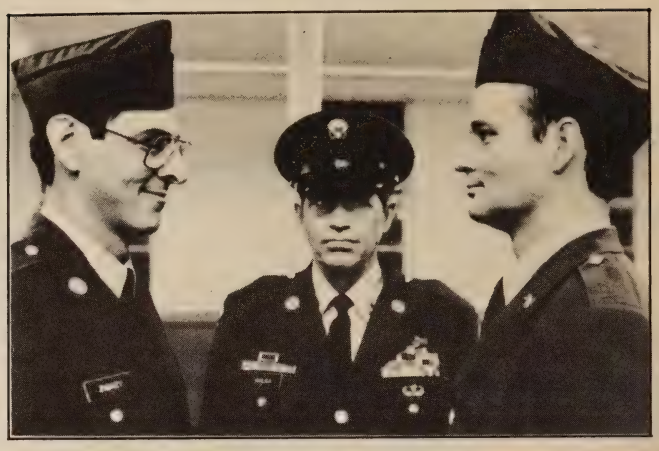
Coming Up In June...



Harold Remis, Warren Oates and Bill Murray star in the side-splitting comedy, STRIPES, coming in June.

The Country Girl
Faye Dunaway, Dick Van Dyke, Ken Howard
Runs 2:17 Rated P-G

A aging, alcoholic actor is given a chance for a lead in a new play. Played by Dick Van Dyke(in an excellent serious role), the play moves through the problems and passions of Georgie, his wife(played by Faye Dunaway) who is falling in love with the play's director(Ken Howard). Don't miss this excellent drama.

The Fan
1981—Rated R (Runs 1 hour, 34 minutes)
Starring Lauren Bacall, James Garner and Maureen Stapleton

A first-rate thriller, and a first-rate cast. Bacall plays Sally Ross, a successful screen star who is the object of a psychopathic "fan." At first the demented groupie is only annoying, but his love for Bacall turns to hate as he attempts to kill everyone close to the star.

Maureen Stapleton (winner of this year's best supporting Oscar for "Reds") is excellent in her portrayal of Bacall's loyal secretary, and James Garner delivers a superb supporting job as Bacall's ex-husband. (Violence, nudity, adult situations.)

The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again
Tim Conway, Don Knotts & Harry Morgan

A Change of Seasons
Shirley MaClaine, Anthony Hopkins, Bo Derek

Dog Day Afternoon
Al Pacino, John Cazale, Charles Durning

Eyewitness
William Hurt, Sigourney Weaver,

Fort Apache, The Bronx
Paul Newman, Edward Asner

Happy Birthday to Me
Melissa Sue Anderson, Glenn Ford

Middle Age Crazy
Bruce Dern, Ann-Margret

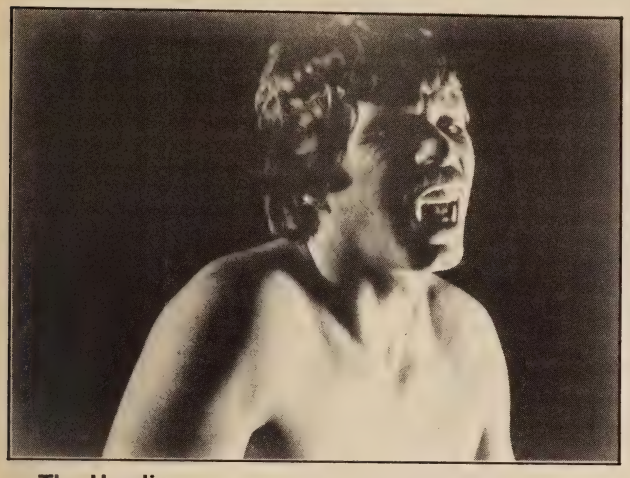
Nighthawks
Silvester Stallone, Billy Dee Williams

Stir Crazy
Richard Pryor, Gene Wilder

The Final Conflict
Sam Neill

Heaven Can Wait
Warren Beatty, Julie Christie

VIEWING THE MOVIES



The Howling
Starring Patrick MacNee, Slim Pickens and John Carradine.
Rated R; Runs 1:35

An investigative reporter gets caught up in a web of terror when stalked by a werewolf. The film moves to a chilling climax, and production technique and special effects are well-above average. Nudity, some violence.

© 1981 Warner Bros. Inc.

Looney, Looney Bugs Bunny Movie
1981—Rated G (Runs 1 hour, 20 minutes)
Starring Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck, Porky Pig, Yosemite Sam, Elmer Fudd and Tweetie Pie. (Animated Feature)
Directed and produced by Friz Freleng.

This is the family movie for the month, with the crazy antics of the timeless Warner Brothers cartoon characters running all over the place in some of their most popular animated adventures. There are several all-new episodes intermixed with hilarious past adventures. Other than Disney, no one makes cartoons like Friz Freleng and the superb staff at Warner.

Return of the Secaucus Seven
1980—Rated R (Runs 1 hour, 46 minutes)
Starring Gordon Clapp

During a weekend reunion, seven friends from the 60s recall their early days of growing up and facing the real world. Acclaimed for its compassionate handling of contemporary topics, and its warm insight into the friends who will never again be the same, "Secaucus Seven" is a good comedy-drama. (Adult situations, nudity)

Excalibur
1981—Rated R (Runs 2 hours, 20 minutes)
Starring Nigel Terry, Helen Mirren and Nicol Williamson.
Written and directed by John Boorman.

This modern-day version of King Arthur and Camelot is a cinematic masterpiece, complete with magical special effects. Filmed in Ireland, the story tells of Merlin the Magician and his stewardship of King Arthur's ascension to the throne of Camelot. Complete with Guinvere and Lancelot, and the final undoing of Arthur's dream to accomplish great deeds. Less music and singing that Richard Harris' "Camelot."

Private Benjamin
1981—Rated R (Runs 1 hour, 50 minutes)
Starring Goldie Hawn, Eileen Brennan and Albert Brooks.

"You're in the army now" is the message for spoiled (and fragile) Judy Benjamin, who decides to join the service for the glamour and excitement of faraway places. What she gets instead is a lot of two-mile runs. But Judy outsmarts her superiors and lands a job with NATO. But Europe is just for starters. The film moves well and is thoroughly entertaining.

Rough Cut
1980—Rated PG (Runs 1 hour, 52 minutes)
Starring Burt Reynolds, Lesley Anne-Down and David Niven.

A breezy, caper-comedy of a jewel thief, a beautiful undercover lady, and wily Scotland Yard inspector. Burt Reynolds puts in a Cary Grant-like performance as the jewel thief, with beautiful Lesley Anne-Down as the undercover agent, with another good performance by David Niven, as the inspector. "Rough Cut" follows in style the classic rogue Grant movies like "It Takes a Thief" and "Charade."

The Four Seasons
1981—Rated PG (Runs 1 hour, 47 minutes)
Starring Alan Alda, Carol Burnett, Len Cariou, Rita Moreno, Jack Weston and Sandy Dennis. Written and directed by Alan Alda.

A delightful, insightful story of close friends and the changes of life, like the change of the seasons. Alda brings out the joy of close friendship, and pokes fun at some changes brought on by middle-age. The three couples meet throughout the year, and like the different times of year, the different attitudes and perspectives on life come through in strong performances by Burnett and Weston. The best scene has to be the "sinking Mercedes." Highly recommended.

Also In June...

ATLANTIC CITY, with Burt Lancaster and Susan Sarandon.
CONTINENTAL DIVIDE, with John Belushi and Blair Brown.
BLOW OUT, with John Travolta.

Country music's First Lady, Loretta Lynn, is one of the top-name performers to appear on the Arthritis Foundation's national telethon. The telethon, to be carried live on the Satellite Program Network (SPN) will take place Memorial Day, May 31.

The show will be hosted by country music great Mickey Gilley and Ralph Emergy. The seven-hour show will come from the Tennessee Performing Arts Center in Nashville. Other performers scheduled to appear include Ray Stevens, Brenda Lee and Bobby Goldsboro.

The Arthritus Foundation was established in 1948 to help seek the cause and cure for arthritis. It maintains 152 offices throughout the country staffed with volunteers who provide local services to arthritis victims.

SPN Network Director Lea Morton Fox said, "We're very pleased to be able to bring this telethon to viewers all across America. We hope our telecast is able to play a part in helping the millions of Americans with arthritis."
